Dear Shri I.Y.R. Krishna Rao,

As you are aware that the IAS as a service is entrusted with the responsibility of formulating and implementing the full-spectrum of public policies and managing governance both at the Centre and in the States. Currently it is felt that young IAS officers are not adequately exposed to the functioning of Government of India at an early stage of their career. Their exposure to Delhi is limited to calling on dignitaries and Parliamentary attachment during their study tour.

2. Central government experience at an early stage would equip the officer with greater knowledge of policy formulation, an appreciation of the country's diversity and resultant challenges, and exposure to the best practices from different parts of the country.

3. Keeping this in mind, a detailed scheme is being worked out for an early exposure to the functioning of the Central Government which would be finalised after consultation with the States. To begin with, it has been decided to post the IAS officers of the 2013 batch in the Government of India after completion of their Phase-II training, for a period of 3 months from 22nd August, 2015. A brief note in this regard is enclosed herewith.

4. Your kind cooperation is solicited for posting these young officers as SDMs immediately on completion of their three month posting, so that they acquire the requisite experience and skills to function effectively as District Magistrate subsequently. We would also require your support in accommodating the officers in the State Guest Houses/ Bhawans at reasonable duty rates.

5. An early reply from your end earliest by 4th August would be highly appreciated.

With regards,

Yours sincerely,

3. Keeping this in mind, a detailed scheme is being worked out for an early exposure to the functioning of the Central Government which would be finalised after consultation with the States. To begin with, it has been decided to post the IAS officers of the 2013 batch in the Government of India after completion of their Phase-II training, for a period of 3 months from 22nd August, 2015. A brief note in this regard is enclosed herewith.

4. Your kind cooperation is solicited for posting these young officers as SDMs immediately on completion of their three month posting, so that they acquire the requisite experience and skills to function effectively as District Magistrate subsequently. We would also require your support in accommodating the officers in the State Guest Houses/ Bhawans at reasonable duty rates.

5. An early reply from your end earliest by 4th August would be highly appreciated.

Dear Shri Mohammad Iqbal Khandey,

As you are aware that the IAS as a service is entrusted with the responsibility of formulating and implementing the full-spectrum of public policies and managing governance both at the Centre and in the States. Currently it is felt that young IAS officers are not adequately exposed to the functioning of Government of India at an early stage of their career. Their exposure to Delhi is limited to calling on dignitaries and Parliamentary attachment during their study tour.

2. Central government experience at an early stage would equip the officer with greater knowledge of policy formulation, an appreciation of the country's diversity and resultant challenges, and exposure to the best practices from different parts of the country.
3. Keeping this in mind, a detailed scheme is being worked out for an early exposure to the functioning of the Central Government which would be finalised after consultation with the States. 2. Central government experience at an early stage would equip the officer with greater knowledge of policy formulation, an appreciation of the country's diversity and resultant challenges, and exposure to the best practices from different parts of the country.
3. Keeping this in mind, a detailed scheme is being worked out for an early exposure to the functioning of the Central Government which would be finalised after consultation with the States. To begin with, it has been decided to post the IAS officers of the 2013 batch in the Government of India after completion of their Phase-II training, for a period of 3 months from 22nd August, 2015. A brief note in this regard is enclosed herewith.
4. Your kind cooperation is solicited for posting these young officers as SDMs immediately on completion of their three month posting, so that they acquire the requisite experience and skills to function effectively as District Magistrate subsequently. We would also require your support in accommodating the officers in the State Guest Houses/ Bhawans at reasonable duty rates.
5. An early reply from your end earliest by 4th August would be highly appreciated.

With regards,

Yours sincerely,

Dear Shri Sanjay Mitra,

As you are aware that the IAS as a service is entrusted with the responsibility of formulating and implementing the full-spectrum of public policies and managing governance both at the Centre and in the States. Currently it is felt that young IAS officers are not adequately exposed to the functioning of Government of India at an early stage of their career. Their exposure to Delhi is limited to calling on dignitaries and Parliamentary attachment during their study tour.

2. Central government experience at an early stage would equip the officer with greater knowledge of policy formulation, an appreciation of the country's diversity and resultant challenges, and exposure to the best practices from different parts of the country.
